This Client reported feeling increasingly overwhelmed due to a significant increase in work demands over the past couple of weeks. She shared that the fast pace and volume of responsibilities have made it difficult to regulate her emotions during challenging situations. Client acknowledged that she tends to lose patience when stressed and recognizes that this reaction limits her ability to slow down, reflect, and process situations effectively.

<h3 id="objective">Objective:</h3>

This Client was alert and oriented ×4. Affect appeared mildly anxious and fatigued, with moments of frustration noted. Speech was clear, coherent, and goal-directed. Client was engaged in session and demonstrated insight into her emotional responses. No evidence of thought disorder, acute distress, or safety concerns was observed.

<h3 id="provider-assessment">Provider Assessment:</h3>

This Client presents with situational stress and emotional dysregulation related to increased workload and time pressure. Reduced patience appears to be a stress response rather than a longstanding behavioral pattern. Client demonstrates good insight and motivation to develop healthier emotion-regulation strategies. Presentation is consistent with adjustment-related stress.

This Client reported increased avoidance of holiday-related activities during the Christmas season due to the loss of her father. She shared that although it has been a couple of years since his passing, the holidays intensify her grief, particularly activities that she once shared with him. Client expressed that this time of year is emotionally difficult and acknowledged that she avoids engaging in holiday traditions as a way to prevent feeling sadness and emotional pain.

<h3 id="objective">Objective:</h3>

This Client presented as alert, oriented, and emotionally reflective. Affect was subdued and tearful at times when discussing her father and the holidays. Speech was coherent and goal-directed. Thought processes were logical. No signs of acute distress, thought disorder, or safety concerns were observed.

<h3 id="provider-assessment">Provider Assessment:</h3>

This Client is experiencing unresolved and recurring grief responses triggered by seasonal reminders and traditions associated with her father. Avoidant coping strategies appear to be used to protect herself from emotional discomfort; however, this avoidance may be limiting her ability to process grief and engage meaningfully in the present. Client demonstrates insight into her emotional patterns and recognizes the connection between avoidance and fear of sadness.

This Client is making progress in recognizing grief triggers and her coping patterns. While avoidance behaviors remain present, increased awareness and emotional insight indicate movement toward healthier grief processing. No regression noted.

<h3 id="insight-and-treatment-recommendations">Insight and Treatment Recommendations:</h3>

The insight and treatment recommendations for this Client is as follows:

Client is gaining insight into how grief continues to manifest during meaningful times of the year. Continued grief-focused work is recommended, including exploring ways to honor her father while allowing space for both sadness and connection. Treatment should focus on reducing avoidance, increasing emotional tolerance, and developing compassionate self-support strategies.

This Client shared that she has been noticing changes in her friendship dynamics and is feeling distant from some of her close friends. She expressed that the relationships do not feel as intact or reciprocal as they once were. Client shared that her tolerance for one-sided friendships is shifting and that she is beginning to desire more mutual investment and effort. She stated that she is unsure whether she is outgrowing some of her friendships or if her needs and expectations are simply evolving. Client noted that she often feels overly invested and disappointed when the same level of energy is not reciprocated.

This Client appeared reflective and emotionally present during the session. Affect was congruent with the discussion—mildly sad and contemplative. Speech was coherent, with appropriate pacing and tone. Client demonstrated insight into her emotional experience and relational patterns. No acute distress or disorganization observed.

<h3 id="provider-assessment">Provider Assessment:</h3>

This Client is experiencing emotional discomfort related to shifting friendship dynamics and changing expectations within her social circle. Her statements suggest growth in self-awareness, self-worth, and boundary-setting. These evolving values are leading to natural reevaluation of existing relationships. The client may be experiencing mild situational sadness and uncertainty as she navigates this social transition. The process appears to be part of healthy emotional and relational development rather than regression.

<h3 id="clients-response">Clients Response:</h3>

This Client was engaged and introspective throughout the session. She verbalized understanding that relationships often shift as personal values and priorities evolve. Client expressed relief in discussing these feelings openly and acknowledged that she may need to create more emotional space in some friendships. She was receptive to exploring how to nurture mutual, balanced connections moving forward.

<h3 id="progressregression-toward-goals">Progress/Regression Toward Goals:</h3>

This Client is showing consistent progress in emotional insight, boundary-setting, and self-awareness. She is learning to assess relationships through the lens of mutual respect and effort. No signs of regression noted. Client appears to be handling the emotional discomfort of these realizations in a healthy and reflective manner.

<h3 id="insight-and-treatment-recommendations">Insight and Treatment Recommendations:</h3>

The insight and treatment recommendations for this Client are as follows:

Client demonstrated growing insight into her emotional needs and the importance of balanced relationships. It is recommended that she continue to explore the concept of reciprocity in friendships and clarify her expectations of others. Journaling or reflective exercises could help her identify which relationships feel nourishing versus draining. Encouraging client to practice assertive communication may also help address relational imbalances directly.

This Client expressed growing concern regarding the lack of progression in her long-term relationship, specifically her boyfriend’s delay in proposing. Client shared that while she has tried to remain patient, she is finding it increasingly difficult due to the absence of a clear plan or timeline for engagement. She disclosed that she has set a personal boundary — if they are not engaged by the end of next year, she intends to take time away from the relationship to reassess her needs and future goals.

<h3 id="objective">Objective:</h3>

This Client presented as emotionally conflicted, alternating between frustration and disappointment when discussing the topic. Affect was congruent with mood, and she maintained good eye contact and insight into her emotions. Thought processes were logical and goal-oriented, with no signs of cognitive distortion or impairment.

<h3 id="provider-assessment">Provider Assessment:</h3>

This Client appears to be experiencing emotional distress related to unmet expectations and uncertainty in her romantic relationship. The delay in commitment has contributed to heightened anxiety regarding her partner’s intentions and the relationship’s future. While she demonstrates insight and a desire for stability, her patience is waning, and unresolved expectations may lead to resentment if not addressed.

<h3 id="clients-response">Clients Response:</h3>

This Client was open and reflective throughout the session. She acknowledged the need to communicate her feelings and expectations more directly with her partner. Client expressed appreciation for reframing exercises and recognized that her anxiety may stem from feeling a lack of control in the situation.

<h3 id="progressregression-toward-goals">Progress/Regression Toward Goals:</h3>

This Client has made progress in identifying emotional triggers and articulating her needs more clearly. She continues to struggle with uncertainty but is moving toward establishing healthy boundaries and self-advocacy. No signs of regression noted.

<h3 id="insight-and-treatment-recommendations">Insight and Treatment Recommendations:</h3>

The insight and treatment recommendations for this Client are as follows:

Client shows growing insight into the importance of balancing patience with assertiveness in relationships. It is recommended that she continue practicing effective communication, focusing on expressing her needs without ultimatums, while maintaining self-awareness of her emotional limits.

This Client expressed being ready to move forward in her relationship toward engagement, but her boyfriend has expressed that he does not believe they are ready. Client shared that this difference has become a point of contention in the relationship. She noted difficulty in discussing the issue with him, as they are not aligned on what “readiness” for engagement means. Client reported feeling frustrated and uncertain about the future of the relationship.

<h3 id="provider-assessment">Provider assessment:</h3>

This Client is experiencing relational stress related to mismatched expectations and timelines for engagement. The client's readiness for commitment contrasts with her boyfriend's hesitation, creating tension and communication breakdowns. This conflict may be increasing client's feelings of insecurity and emotional distress. Client demonstrates insight into the difficulty of navigating these conversations but may benefit from strategies to improve communication and manage relational expectations.

<h2 id="intervention-response-and-treatment-recommendations">INTERVENTION, RESPONSE, AND TREATMENT RECOMMENDATIONS</h2>

<h3 id="clinical-interventions-used">Clinical Interventions used:</h3>

The clinical interventions used throughout this session are as follows:

<ul>
  <li>
    Explored the client's personal definition of "readiness" for engagement and the values tied to this perspective.
  </li>
  <li>
    Discussed the importance of open, non-defensive communication when approaching sensitive topics with her partner.
  </li>
  <li>
    Introduced communication strategies (e.g., "I" statements, active listening) to reduce defensiveness and promote mutual understanding.
  </li>
  <li>
    Provided normalization and validation regarding differing timelines in relationships.
  </li>
  <li>
    Encouraged client to reflect on her own needs and boundaries related to commitment.
  </li>
</ul>

<h3 id="clients-response">Clients Response:</h3>

This Client was open and reflective during the session. She acknowledged the challenge of hearing her partner's perspective and admitted that she tends to avoid the conversation to reduce conflict. Client expressed willingness to try new communication strategies and appeared relieved to have a safe space to process her concerns.

<h3 id="progressregression">Progress/Regression:</h3>

The progress observed in client’s ability to identify personal definitions and values tied to engagement. Client is beginning to consider communication strategies that may reduce tension with her partner. Regression noted in avoidance behaviors, as she struggles to engage in constructive conversations with her boyfriend.

This Client shared that her boyfriend had a difficult time with her nephew during camp and that she expected her brother, the nephew's father, to intervene. However, her brother did not support the situation, and both her nephew and brother treated her boyfriend poorly. Client expressed feeling disappointed and hurt by her brother's lack of support. She noted that while this incident has not negatively impacted her relationship with her boyfriend, it does influence how she plans to move forward in her relationship with her brother.

<h3 id="provider-assessment">Provider assessment:</h3>

This Client presents with feelings of disappointment and betrayal related to family dynamics and lack of support from her brother. Affect was reflective and somewhat frustrated, though she remained calm and thoughtful in processing her emotions. Client demonstrates clarity in differentiating between her romantic relationship, which remains stable, and her family relationship, which she views as strained. Insight appears intact, and no acute safety or mental health concerns observed.

Additionally, she reported experiencing difficulties with communication at her part-time job, which has contributed to feelings of stress and emotional fatigue. She expressed a desire to find clarity, stability, and to better manage boundaries and emotional responses.

<h3 id="provider-assessment">Provider assessment:</h3>

This Client continues to experience symptoms consistent with Prolonged Grief and Depressed Mood. Her grief remains unresolved and compounded by emotional stressors in her personal and professional life. Client appears to be in the contemplation stage of change, demonstrating growing insight into her emotional patterns and a willingness to explore healthier coping mechanisms and boundary setting. Her ability to identify and verbalize her feelings is a clinical strength and reflects moderate emotional insight and motivation for growth.

<h2 id="intervention-response-and-treatment-recommendations">INTERVENTION, RESPONSE, AND TREATMENT RECOMMENDATIONS</h2>

The clinical intervention used during this session are as follows:

<ol start="1">
  <li>
    Explored the client’s grief through Narrative Therapy techniques to help her externalize the loss and identify how it continues to influence her present experiences.
  </li>
  <li>
    Introduced CBT-based reframing strategies to identify and challenge unhelpful thoughts related to abandonment, loneliness, and work-related stress.
  </li>
  <li>
    Discussed the importance of boundary-setting and emotional self-regulation, using role-play scenarios to model assertive communication.
  </li>
  <li>
    Guided reflection on ways to remain emotionally connected in a long-distance relationship while honoring personal needs and space.
  </li>
</ol>

<h3 id="clients-response">Clients Response:</h3>

This Client was engaged throughout the session and responded well to therapeutic interventions. She expressed appreciation for being able to process her thoughts openly and acknowledged that she has avoided addressing some of her grief and communication challenges in the past. She appeared receptive to the boundary-setting tools and requested to continue exploring this further in upcoming sessions.

<h3 id="progressregression">Progress/Regression:</h3>

This Client is making slow but meaningful progress. She is beginning to identify emotional triggers and express her needs with more clarity. While the grief remains, she is showing signs of increased awareness and desire to heal. No regression noted; emotional expression and motivation are improving.

<h3 id="insight-and-treatment-recommendations">Insight and Treatment Recommendations:</h3>

The insight and treatment recommendations are as follows:

Client demonstrates emerging insight into the impact of her grief, relational dynamics, and communication difficulties on her well-being. Continued focus will be placed on grief processing, emotional regulation, strengthening interpersonal boundaries, and improving coping strategies.

<ul>
  <li>
    Continue CBT and narrative therapy.
  </li>
  <li>
    Introduce mindfulness-based interventions to reduce emotional reactivity.
  </li>
  <li>
    Explore family systems dynamics as they relate to grief and identity.
  </li>
  <li>
    Recommend journaling as a tool for tracking emotional patterns between sessions.
  </li>
</ul>

<h3 id="subjective-complaint-presenting-problem">Subjective Complaint/ Presenting Problem:</h3>

This Client reported feeling confused and disappointed after a recent workplace conflict involving a colleague who altered choreography she had created. When the client asked the colleague to communicate changes in the future, the colleague reported the interaction to management, claiming the client was hostile. Client was caught off guard when contacted by management, as she was unaware there was an issue. She expressed feeling indifferent about the company, staff, and leadership due to not being asked for her side of the story and being reprimanded without clarification.

<h3 id="provider-assessment">Provider assessment:</h3>

This Client presented with a calm but emotionally flat affect, expressing feelings of confusion, frustration, and emotional detachment from her work environment. She demonstrated appropriate insight into the situation and maintained a thoughtful tone when reflecting on the interpersonal conflict. No signs of acute distress were noted, but client appears to be emotionally withdrawing from her workplace due to perceived lack of support and fairness.

This Client shared that she is struggling with her longstanding friendship, which she believes she may be outgrowing. She expressed feeling emotionally exhausted due to a perceived lack of accountability and patterns of manipulation from her best friend. The client also disclosed that she is the godmother to her friend's son, which adds a layer of emotional complexity to the situation. Client is seeking guidance on how to initiate a direct but compassionate conversation to express her dissatisfaction and set appropriate boundaries.

<h3 id="provider-assessment">Provider assessment:</h3>

This Client presented as emotionally drained but motivated to address the issue in a healthy manner. She displayed insight into the emotional toll the friendship is taking and awareness of her own needs for emotional reciprocity and respect. Her internal conflict stems from a sense of obligation, guilt, and fear of relational fallout. Client is highly self-aware and appears to be in a contemplative stage of change, weighing how best to communicate her boundaries without causing harm or unnecessary conflict.

<h2 id="intervention-response-and-treatment-recommendations">INTERVENTION, RESPONSE, AND TREATMENT RECOMMENDATIONS</h2>

The clinical interventions used during this session include:

<ol start="1">
<li>
Provided psychoeducation on healthy boundaries in adult friendships, especially when emotional roles (e.g., godparent) are involved.

</li>
<li>
Used values clarification to help the client articulate what she needs in friendships moving forward.
</li>
<li>
Introduced assertive communication strategies including “I” statements and language for difficult conversations.
</li>
<li>
Explored potential outcomes and emotional impacts of addressing vs. avoiding the issue.
</li>
<li>
Normalized the experience of outgrowing relationships and gave space for processing grief and guilt associated with such transitions.
</li>
</ol>

<h3 id="clients-response">Clients Response:</h3>

This Client responded positively and reported that the interventions helped her feel more empowered and prepared to have a difficult but necessary conversation. She expressed a desire to be honest while also preserving the dignity of the relationship, especially given her godmother role. Client showed relief in having her concerns validated and appreciated having language and tools to express her feelings with clarity and compassion.

<h3 id="progressregression">Progress/Regression:</h3>

This Client is making progress in recognizing her emotional boundaries and expressing a clear intent to act in alignment with her values. While she remains concerned about the conversation’s impact, she is moving toward assertive conflict resolution and emotional autonomy. No regression was noted during the session.

<h3 id="insight-and-treatment-recommendations">Insight and Treatment Recommendations:</h3>

The insight and treatment recommendations are as follows:

<ol start="1">

<h3 id="subjective-complaint-presenting-problem">Subjective Complaint/ Presenting Problem:</h3>

This Client expressed that she is actively working to learn how to "adult" and adjust to the increased responsibilities and demands of independent living. She shared that she was highly sheltered during childhood, with her parents making most decisions for her. As a result, she now struggles with decision-making, confidence, and hesitation when facing new or unfamiliar responsibilities. Client expressed a desire to become more self-sufficient but feels overwhelmed at times.

<h3 id="provider-assessment">Provider assessment:</h3>

This Client presented as open and engaged, with a tone of mild frustration and curiosity. She demonstrated growing self-awareness about how her upbringing continues to influence her current functioning. Affect was stable and appropriate to content. No signs of acute distress, though occasional self-doubt and uncertainty were noted in her language. Client appears motivated to change but lacks tools and reinforcement to do so confidently.

<h3 id="clinical-interventions-used">Clinical Interventions used:</h3>

The following clinical interventions were incorporated throughout the session:

<ol start="1">
  <li>
    Psychoeducation on developmental independence, decision-making strategies, and the impact of over-sheltering.
  </li>
  <li>
    Cognitive restructuring to challenge limiting beliefs (e.g., “I always need guidance,” “I’ll mess up if I decide alone”).
  </li>
  <li>
    Problem-solving skills practice, using real-life decisions the client is currently facing.
  </li>
  <li>
    Encouraged self-reflective journaling to track decision-making experiences and emotional responses.

<h3 id="presenting-problem">Presenting Problem:</h3>

This Client is a 27-year-old African American woman who presents with sadness, emotional fatigue, and difficulty coping with the unexpected death of her father in 2023. Client reports that his passing has left a significant emotional void, describing her father as her role model and primary source of guidance. She shares ongoing challenges adjusting to this loss while simultaneously navigating major life transitions, including a career change, graduate studies, and a long-term relationship approaching engagement. Client identifies her main concern as “trying to keep it all together while grieving.”

<h3 id="psychosocial-history">Psychosocial History:</h3>

This Client is currently in a committed romantic relationship of five years and reports a strong, supportive bond with her partner. She expresses hope for engagement and marriage in the near future. Client reports that her partner has been emotionally supportive during her grieving process, though she admits that she sometimes struggles to express vulnerability.

Professionally, the client recently accepted a new position and will soon transition out of her current role as a middle school teacher. She reports increasing disillusionment with the education system, citing systemic barriers and inequities that contributed to occupational stress and dissatisfaction. In addition to teaching, she works part-time as a dance instructor, though she expresses discomfort with the dynamics and competitiveness among team members.

Client is also enrolled in a Ph.D. program, which she describes as both intellectually fulfilling and emotionally taxing due to high expectations and limited time for rest or self-care. She reports maintaining a small but supportive social circle of close friends and family members.

<h3 id="mental-health-history">Mental Health History:</h3>

This Client denies any prior history of mental health diagnosis, psychiatric hospitalization, counseling, or psychotropic medication use. She reports that this is her first time seeking therapy and describes her motivation as wanting to “process grief in a healthy way” and prevent emotional burnout.

<h3 id="medical-history">Medical History</h3>

This Client reports persistent sadness, tearfulness, and emotional numbness related to her father’s death. She describes difficulty concentrating on academic and professional tasks, occasional restlessness, fatigue, and feelings of guilt when she experiences moments of happiness.

Onset: Symptoms began following her father’s unexpected death in 2023 and have persisted for approximately one year, with intermittent periods of improvement and emotional regression around anniversaries, holidays, and reminders of her father.

Frequency: Symptoms occur daily, with periods of heightened sadness in the evenings or when discussing her father.

Intensity: Moderate; client reports being able to maintain daily functioning but notes that her emotional distress has reduced her motivation, energy, and enjoyment of previously pleasurable activities.

Client denies suicidal ideation, intent, or self-harm behaviors. She reports moments of emotional overwhelm but states she uses prayer, journaling, and exercise to manage difficult emotions.

This Client denies any family history of diagnosed mental illness, substance abuse, or psychiatric treatment. She describes her family as close-knit, emotionally expressive, and faith-oriented, however there is undiagnosed family history of anxiety.

<h3 id="any-religious-or-spirituality-considerations">Any religious or spirituality considerations?</h3>

This Client identifies as Christian and reports that her faith plays a central role in her values, coping, and worldview. She states that prayer, attending church, and spiritual reflection have been important sources of comfort and guidance throughout her grieving process. However, she acknowledges occasional spiritual questioning since her father's passing, particularly around the "why" of his unexpected death. Client is open to integrating faith-based coping strategies within therapy.

<h3 id="cultural-considerations">Cultural Considerations</h3>

This Client reports as an African American woman and professional educator, client reports feeling pressure to "stay composed and keep performing" despite personal loss. She acknowledges cultural expectations around strength, emotional resilience, and maintaining professionalism that can sometimes make it difficult to express vulnerability.

She also notes that representation and systemic inequities in education have contributed to her feelings of frustration and fatigue, particularly as a Black woman navigating predominantly white institutions in both academia and education. Client values cultural competence, empathy, and authenticity in therapeutic relationships.

<h3 id="justification-of-diagnosis">Justification of Diagnosis:</h3>

This Client’s presentation meets criteria for Generalized Anxiety Disorder and Adjustment Disorder with Depressed Mood per the DSM-5-TR:

<ul>
  <li>
    A. Emotional or behavioral symptoms in response to an identifiable stressor (death of her father, career transition).
  </li>
  <li>
    B. Symptoms occurred within three months of the stressor and are disproportionate to the severity or intensity of the event.
  </li>
  <li>
    C. Significant distress is present and affects social and occupational functioning (e.g., decreased concentration, motivation, and emotional energy).
  </li>
  <li>
    D. Symptoms are not representative of normal bereavement alone, given duration and functional impact.
  </li>
  <li>
    E. Disturbance does not meet criteria for another mental disorder and is not an exacerbation of a preexisting condition.

<h3 id="clinical-recommendations">Clinical Recommendations:</h3>

The clinical recommendations for this Client are as follows:

<ol start="1">
  <li>
    Individual Psychotherapy (bi-weekly):

    <ul>
      <li>
        Focus on grief processing and emotional expression related to father’s death.
      </li>
      <li>
        Integrate grief counseling and cognitive-behavioral techniques to address guilt, sadness, and loss-related rumination.
      </li>
      <li>
        Explore meaning-making and acceptance of life transitions.
      </li>
    </ul>
  </li>

<li>
Faith-Based Integration:

<ul>
<li>
Incorporate client’s Christian beliefs and spiritual coping methods (e.g., prayer, scripture reflection) as therapeutic strengths.
</li>
<li>
Address spiritual questioning through supportive dialogue and meaning-centered approaches.
</li>
</ul>
</li>
<li>
Stress and Role Management:

<ul>
<li>
Support client in balancing academic, professional, and personal responsibilities.
</li>
<li>
Teach mindfulness and grounding techniques to reduce cognitive and emotional overload.
</li>
</ul>
</li>
<li>
Social Support and Connection:

<ul>
<li>
Encourage engagement with supportive peers, mentors, and community members.
</li>
<li>
Explore opportunities for group support or grief workshops, if appropriate.
</li>
</ul>
</li>
<li>
Future Goals:

<ul>

      <li>
        Facilitate emotional preparation for life transitions (e.g., engagement, marriage, new job).
      </li>
      <li>
        Continue reinforcing self-compassion, emotional authenticity, and work-life balance.
      </li>
    </ul>
  </li>
